DON'T TALK DITCH IN HARLEM

PROPERTY OWNERS ARE FINDING IT TOO EXPENSIVE.

Tenants Won't Carry Alpenstocks and Walk in Rubber Boots to Reach Their Homes, so High Priced Modern Apartments Go Empty Till the Mess Is Over

Hitherto the bitter complaints against the continuance of the mess made in the streets by the ditching process have come from business men in the main section of the city whose places have been cut off by dirt mounds, bombarded with rocks from blasting operations and beset with holes into which the unwary may fall.

They are not the only sufferers. There came to THE SUN yesterday from far uptown a cry from a prominent real estate operator about the injury wrought to realty values in the territory north of Fiftyninth street by conditions along the ditch up there. It is the same story of houses left empty, rents down and property failing to earn even interest on mortgages, while taxes ever increase. The same experience has been suffered in Forty-second street and Fourth avenue while the mound builders have had it all their own way

But some property owners in the upper part of the city have harder times in prospect even than the Forty-second street merchants, who are hoping that they have seen the worst. It happens in this way:

There are being built on and around the line of the subway along the old Boulevard about forty-four new apartment vard about forty-four new apartment houses, most of them of the newest and most costly type. These houses were to have been finished in time for therenting season this fall. The strikes in the building trade delayed them, and none is expected to be ready for occupancy until the winter. In these forty-four buildings there is tied up more than four million dellars of capital. They will house from twelve to forty families each, or something like 5,000 persons in all. The time at which they will be completed will be about the worst period in the whole year for renting that class of property.

"That was bad enough," said the real estate man who explained this to THE SUN reporter. "But what chance in the world have we to let one apartment to one the main avenue. Up there in the State it is now in and is likely to be in for months You wade ankle deep in mudover ricketty plank bridges if you want to cross from east to west. Lengthwise of the Boulevard folks need alpenstocks to get along.

"How can we do anything with our property under circumstances like these? Some of the houses are approaching completion. We might advertise 'em and invite possible tenants up to see 'em, make the rents easy at first and take a chance of people putting up with temporary quarters people putting up with temporary quarters for a while and waiting a few weeks fo ours to be ready for 'em. If the subway is ever finished and this thing cleaned up we may come to live here. But we'll wait to see.' While they are waiting and interest on our mortgages is accumulating what are we to do?

"New high class property in this section is practically cut out of the market. It doesn't matter whether it is on the Boulevard or a side street. People have to owners almost explode.

"That's what ditch construction has done for us. Ditch? You couldn't get consents to build another subway on that plan up there if you'd promise to line it with gold and turn the property owners loose in it with pickaxes and buillion sacks before you started the trains. No more ditching for us—not at any price."

GREEK HELD FOR ABDUCTION.

Young Girl Says He Brought Her Here From

Baltimore by a Promise of Marriage. Petro Elmo, a Greek, who says his home is in Baltimore, Md., was held in $2,000 bail in the Tombs police court yesterday for examination Saturday morning on the charge of abducting Martha Loftus, who says she is 16, but looks younger. Patrolman O'Connell of the Elizabeth street station was accosted by Elmo early yesterday morning at the corner of Baxter and Park

The policeman noticed that a young girl wearing dresses above her shoe tops who had been walking with Elmo, stepped into a doorway when the young man walked up to him. Elmo wanted to know where he could find a boarding house. O'Connell got suspicious and asked him who the girt was.

"Oh, she's my sister," said Elmo.

O'Connell called the girl to him and she confessed that she had run away from her home in Baltimore with Elmo on Wednesday night.

She said that Elmo asked her to go to New York with him and get married.

Elmo, who is 21, said that he intended to marry the girl. She was sent to the Children's Society.

SCHOOL SITUATION IN LIMA

Pasteries: 805 to 515 West 234 St.

SUPT. SKINNER MODIFIES HIS RESTRAINING ORDER.

Authorizes the Levying of Taxes, but Restraints Regarding the Hiring of Buildings and Forbidding Sisters to Teach Still Remain in Force.

LIMA, N. Y., Oct. 8 .- The public school situation in this place is now more involved than ever. Supt. Skinner seems to have awakened to a full realization of the fact that he is responsible for the closed schools here and the consequent violation of the world have we to let one apartment to one person even at a nominal rent with the main avenue. Up there in the State it that Supt. Skinner, being informed that teachers wearing a religious garb had been employed, had served upon Trustee Hendrick an injunction restraining him, among other things, from levying "a tax for any sum whatever for the purpose of maintain-ing a school" in the district for the current year. Evidently the superintendent did not grasp the full significance of his own action, viz., that it meant the closing of the schools. Yesterday he sent Trustee Hendrick a modification of this injunction, which authorizes the levying of taxes. The restraints regarding the hiring of buildings and forbidding the sisters to teach remain.

In the new order and in an accompanying letter of instruction Mr. Skinner endeavors to throw the responsibility of the situation on the trustee—at least from this time forward. The "order" directs the trustee to open school in the State building with at least two teachers. As four or five teachers are needed to care for the children of the district, and as the State building is capable of accommodating barely half of them, the superintendent in his letter of instruction suggests a way out of the difficulty which is somewhat extraordinary. It is that one set of teachers and one set of pupils occupy the school building from 8 o'clock in the morning until to throw the responsibility of the situation ing from 8 o'clock in the morning until 1 in the afternoon, and that a new relay of teachers and pupils occupy it from 1 to 6 o'clock. There is no provision for night

Trustee Hendrick's letter of reply to Supt. Skinner will hardly relieve him from responsibility for the closed schools. It responsibility for the closed schools. It says in part:

"In your letter of instruction you do not inform me how I am to legally violate the lawful contract with 'duly qualified' teachers; yet the district is bound by this contract. Neither do you instruct me how the wages of the additional teachers, who are supposed to act as substitutes for those to whom you object, are to be paid, the annual school meeting having made no provision for them. Until I am instructed by you upon these points I do not see how I can consider your order seriously."

Referring to the arrangement by which he is expected to accommodate all the children of the district in the public school building which can accommodate only half, Trustee Hendrick says:

Trustee Hendrick says:
"I do not feel that it is any part of my

"It usee Hendrick says:

"I do not feel that it is any part of my duty as trustee to ask either the children or the parents, or even the teachers, to make such a sacrifice as to accommodate themselves to the unusual hours and unusual sessions of school which you suggest. To require them to do so would be an unwarranted infringement of their rights and liberties. We are not, in Lima, under the same conditions as are the congested districts of New York city, where school room is an absolute impossibility. We have here the same school facilities which have existed for the last thirty years. Moreover, to carry out your suggestion would be a direct violation of the consolidated school law, which specifically provides for such emergencies as overcrowded school rooms, and which directs the trustee to establish a temporary or branch school or schools in such places as shall best accommodate such children, and hire any room or rooms for the keeping of school."

The trustee concludes his letter to Mr. Skinner by saying:

"Therefore, the responsibility for the Skinner by saying:

"Therefore, the responsibility for the closed schools must still rest, not with the trustee, but with the Superintendent of Public Instruction, until such time as I Public Instruction, until such time as I shall receive from you instructions which I can follow consistently with the consolidated school law and with the legal obligations now binding on this district."

The petition for the Governor will be put in motion to-day, as the truancy law goes into effect on the first day of October, and all children of the district are now compulsory truants, owing to the action of Supt. Skinner.

Supt. Skinner has coined a new phrase to designate the "duly qualified" teachers who wear a religious garb. In his letter of instruction he refers to them as "prohibited people."

The Waranafer Store

The Supreme Test

Dress Goods supply the thermometer by which to test a Dry Goods store. WANA-MAKER'S is devoted principally to Dry Goods. Try the store by the Dress Goods. The abler the critic the stronger will the verdict of approval be.

The pen halts and pauses over Dress Goods. To make the little bit of steel spread the "writing fluid" upon paper in such words as will cause types and printers' ink to burst with eloquence! When Mr. Pulitzer's College of Journalism begins to turn out advertisers and journalists then the genius may come-hasn't arrived just yet.

That's why our advertising editor hates to write up Dress Goods. Some emergencies arise of which cumulative expletives fail to express the spirit. There are crises in dress goods styles that no brain can assimilate for intelligent description.

Just such a crisis nearly this season. It's a dress goods paradox. Dress goods are for women, but the styles are for men-only exaggerated. The choicest Dress Goods are French, but the patterns are of the Highlands-Scotch. The Yankee challenges the Latin in the season's styles with the Irish -Blarney.

Description-it's only sar-

Out of all this hash of words we only want to provoke you into an examination of our Dress Goods stock. As the styles of the season go, it is an unmatched stock. But you'll never know how the styles of the season go, until you see the long lines of pieces ranged on the counter edges. They present their compliments. they invite you, and the oration they pronounce without words is the speech of the Five Nations on the Dress Goods topic—a museum of world-thought about stuffs for women's costumes.

Men's Ready-Made Clothing.-2d Fl.

Constant trying has had its result. Season after season finds Ready-made Clothing closer to the perfection of the Made-to-measure kind. Men of skill and taste have practically realized their honorable and laudable aspiration to lift Ready-to-wear Clothing above the provincial stigma that at one time attached to it Machinery still plays its part in the production of Clothing - but its part is now a minor one—almost insignificant and unimportant in everything save economy of time. Manufacturers strike the keynote to betterment as they apply more and more hand-work to their goods. Cutting out a dozen suits from a pattern, in the same length of time required to cut one, is a process that survives, because it saves money and does not
